Now we want to get to know more about who you are! These responses don't need to be very long, but please be thorough and make sure you address every part of each question.

Why are you seeking this internship opportunity right now? What are you hoping to learn? ***

What do you feel are the most important elements of your identity, of “who you are”? This could include age, gender, ethnic background, socioeconomic status, religion or anything else that feels important to how you see yourself in relation to the world. We ask because it is important to us to bring together people with lots of different identities, and to build a program that strives towards co-creating safe space. ***

You've probably answered this question for the Field Academy before. That's okay! What feels true for you right now?

Tell us about an activity, idea, or discussion that you would love to bring to the Field Academy this summer. It can be something you've done before or something new you've heard about and would like to try out. Tell us how you would introduce the idea/activity to the group and how you would debrief it afterward. ***

How will an internship with the Field Academy help you on the path you're currently following?
How do you feel that our values, principles, and philosophy will be valuable to you as you pursue your own goals? ***

Anything else? Literally anything!

It doesn't need to be relevant to the program at all! We just want to get to know you better!

Typically the intern in this position will work with another staff to design and teach one of the four academy classes. Tell us which academic classes might be a good fit for you. Remember, these classes will be framed around the trip's theme of food and justice so the content you're teaching will be more specific than the titles listed here. (We don't expect that you'll be an expert on any of these things; that's the course instructor's job. We just want to know what you'll be most excited about helping with.)

This is my jam!

I would be very interested in this.

I could do this one with an inspiring instructor to help.

This would be hard for me.
